It is noticeable that each of the deer men wears two spurs, because there may be riding of the hardest for any or all of them. Each has a horn slung over his shoulder, a cow's has a horn slung over his shoulder, a cow's horn beautifully polished and engraved and sawed off a foot from its lower end, in which a hole has been bored and the bony substance whittled to fit the lips. That is the typical hunter's horn of the South and in the hands of an artist it may be heard for miles. One of the men, because he likes the music of it, puts his horn to his lips and winds a blast. Then from the leashed hounds surges a mighty chorus, prolonged, musical, inspiring, deep. The smoke waves to it, it rolls, claims claimers and beats upon the heavy air, it sounds a challenge to the nobliest buck that ever stretched his gallant length along the forest aisles. In answer to it the triimpeter swings his battered hat, emiss a strictard yell and his horse bounds under him as if hard buren with the spor. The strate are cast of and the nack streams away, tails up, noses down, whimpering like frightened women, and the men press after them.

"My wife is a fiving example of what Dr. Greene's Nervura can do for any one that is all worn out and rou down. She took several bottles of the Nervora and we both feel that we can not do or say too much in praise of your wonderful medicine. Knowing what it had done for my wife, and as I was feeling unwell myself, I think caused from the constant strain that is on me looking after the busy corner which is under my charge, I also took some Nervurn and find that it has made me all right." J. W. HOGAN.

I could not sleep at might and was constantly troubled with Nervous Sick Headaches to such an extent that my life was a burden to me. I did so and found that it did all you claimed for it. My nerves are strong, my headaches are all gone, and I feel that your medicine has made a new woman of me. I cannot say too much in praise of it, for it certainly is a great medicine for all suffering women." MRS. C. E. HOGAN. Remember that Dr. Greene's Nervora is not a patent medicine but is the
